In 2009, Fourth Street Clinic served 6,500 homeless Utahns with 28,500 visits.
Each year since 2005, the Utah Department of Community and Culture and the Salt Lake County Homeless Coordinating Council conduct a Point-In-Time (PIT) Count of homeless Utahns using the U.S Department of Housing and Urban Development’s (HUD) homeless definition. It is important to note that PIT Counts tend to underrepresent the homeless population, because they do not capture those who experience only brief episodes of homelessness or those who continuously move from home to home (and cannot pay rent). The PIT Counts are also the basis for Utah’s 10-Year Plan to End Chronic Homelessness. The data shown here reflects the annualized numbers detailed in these reports.

Homelessness Myths and Facts

MYTH: People who are homeless stay homeless for a long time.

FACT: The vast majority of Utahns - 67 percent - are homeless for less than six weeks.

MYTH: Most are single men.

FACT: Persons in families are the fastest growing, comprising 46 percent of Utah’s homeless population.

MYTH: The homeless population is transient, migrating to cities with the best services.

FACT: 77% of homeless individuals and 88% of homeless families lived in Utah when they became homeless.

MYTH: Homeless people are dangerous.

FACT: Homeless people are more likely to be victims of crime. Though prone to commit non-violent, petty crimes like loitering and trespassing (mostly due to the conditions of being homeless), they are less likely to commit crimes against a person or property.

MYTH: They are to blame for their situation.

FACT: Many are victims of circumstance and have become physically and mentally ill due to violence and abuse.

Fourth Street Clinic helps homeless Utahns improve their health and quality of life by providing health care and support services. With consistent health care, our patients live longer and healthier lives and often find the hope necessary to break the homeless cycle. In 2009, Fourth Street Clinic served 6,500 homeless patients.

HISTORY

The mid-1980s brought a dramatic rise in Salt Lake City’s homeless population. During this time, Salt Lake City’s downtown was being revitalized and several substandard, single-room occupancy hotels (SROs) that offered rooms for just a few dollars a night and required no leases were razed and redeveloped. In total, 800 low-income housing units were torn down displacing 1,000 very poor residents from their homes and jobs. With no public plan to rapidly re-house or support these residents, long lines began forming outside area social service agencies as these newly homeless Utahns tried to access food and other basic needs.

Medical anthropologist Allan Ainsworth, PhD, a long-time resident of Utah and graduate of the University of Utah, saw these long lines of people and knew that having access to on-going health care services would mean the difference between temporary and intergenerational homelessness. With a federal grant, Dr. Ainsworth founded Fourth Street Clinic in 1988 inside a small office across the street from Utah’s largest emergency shelter. The triage clinic was staffed with one, part-time nurse who relied heavily on hospitals for patient treatments. Today, with a staff of 45 and a volunteer network of more than 200, Fourth Street Clinic is a comprehensive health care home that serves 6,500 homeless men, women and children with coordinated primary care, behavioral health, specialty and pharmaceutical services. By increasing homeless Utahns access to primary care delivered in a coordinated clinical setting, Fourth Street Clinic is a major partner in promoting community health, reducing preventable hospitalizations and emergency department visits and achieving across-the-board health care savings.
Homeless patients generally come to Fourth Street Clinic for vaccinations, basic public health screens or acute care for injuries and illnesses, but it is undiagnosed and untreated chronic diseases that most commonly deteriorate health and perpetuate homelessness. As a consequence of poor nutrition, inadequate hygiene, exposure to violence and to the elements, increased contact with communicable diseases, and the constant stress of residential instability, people without homes suffer from health problems at much higher rates than those in the general population. National statistics show forty-six percent of homeless individuals reporting chronic health conditions, including high blood pressure, diabetes, and cancer. At Fourth Street Clinic, it is Type II Diabetes, hypertension, depression, high cholesterol, Hepatitis C and obesity that top the diagnosis list; asthma, COPD, seizures and back pain are not far behind. The good news is that with on-going, coordinated health care and the use of volunteer doctors, these diseases can be controlled and good health restored, but it means working with patients to come into clinic more regularly for follow-up exams and screens.

In 2009 Utah’s struggling economy and the novel H1N1 virus brought an unprecedented increase in the number of homeless patients coming to Fourth Street Clinic. As we look forward it will be our challenge to fully engage this new volume of patients in on-going health care to promote long-term health and successfully support their transition out of homelessness. With federal American Recovery and Reinvestment Act (ARRA) funding and the help of Big-D Construction, we finished a 2,500 sq. ft. remodel in 2009 that added three more exam rooms, created a group therapy space and made more efficient use of the pharmacy space. Additionally, we completed our conversion to electronic health records and now provide the same level of care in 30-minute appointments as we used to do in 40 minutes. Combined, these infrastructure improvements helped us grow from serving an average of 87 patients a day in late 2008 to 115 at the end of 2009. Additionally, we built new and diverse partnerships to fund the additional costs associated with providing more medical care and more visits. Morgan Stanley, The Scott and Dorothy Watkins Foundation, The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints Humanitarian Services, Goldman Sachs, John Netto and Catherine Putnam-Netto and Zions Bank all pledged new support and with their help we will be able to turn back the tide of homelessness and restore our community health.

Sincerely,

Allan D. Ainsworth, PhD
Executive Director

Many thanks to our numerous anonymous donors!
Fourth Street Clinic is governed by a volunteer board of directors that meets monthly. Members of the board serve up to two, three-year terms and then rotate off the board for at least one year. They are also asked to serve on one of six committees and donate personally or raise funds for Fourth Street Clinic.
